Fly Boys: Western Pennsylvania's Tuskegee Airmen
 Airs Sunday, February 26th at 12:30pm

FLY BOYS: WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA'S TUSKEGEE AIRMEN tells the story of struggle and the ultimate triumph of the brave African-American soldiers who served their country during World War II. The film chronicles the "Tuskegee Airmen" program, a controversial military initiative designed to measure African-Americans' competence for flying the engines of war. This fascinating documentary features the stories of the more than 40 aviators from western Pennsylvania, including the pilots, navigators and bombardiers who flew fighter and bomber planes during the war, as well as the maintenance and support staff, instructors and personnel who kept the planes in the air.

POETRY

"FEBRUARY'S THE FORM OF IT"

BY JAMES OLIVER RYAN

Man can gaze with thought---and---go anywhere

He can chase down hopes and dreams---and---and what lives within them

To take up live with positive form---to think---futuristic

Drafting thoughts---creative structures---to make things easier

To place a smile on ones face---from a---timely idea

That's what makes it---with ovation,

We live life in---duration---and---the form of it---makes us

You---can make music with the world---make it your---opus

An Adirondack VR Adventure: Local Musicians Wanted

---DR. ANTHONY BETRUS
THE GAME CONNOISSEUR

Inspired by Adirondack culture and lore, the game begins without preamble, on a cold, dark winter night, with a character running across a frozen Cranberry Lake bay. There are distant sirens blaring and a dog barking. The action cuts back to recent events, with a truck hauling stolen property crashing, careening off a road hedged in closely with trees. Two men awaken after being dazed. The protagonist, Kristof, awakens from being knocked and is looking directly at an unconscious Frenchie, the driver, who he quickly shakes to consciousness. Then the police sirens spur them into panicked action. In departing from the accident, they split up with no spoken plans to meet back up at some place or time. You (Kristof) walk forward hazily, then realize that you are leaving easily-followed tracks. "Damn, these tracks will give me away to anyone following. I'll have to find some way to hide my trail." Looking around, you notice a hard packed snowmobile trail that will hide your boot tracks nicely. One direction leads to town, and the other toward Lightning Point on the lake's eastern shore. The song "Getting Back on Track" starts playing in the background.

And so begins this episodic Adirondack adventure, a product of Cryptic North, a newly formed game development company based in Ogdensburg, NY. The founding members are all North Country natives, including: Producer and Lead Programmer Warren Bullock (Cranberry Lake/Ogdensburg); Writer Joshua Dickinson (Fine/Harrisville); Game Designer Anthony Betrus (Harrisville/Potsdam); and Game Programmer Gregory Walrath (Canton/Ogdensburg). The goal for the team is to capture the spirit of the North Country in a highly immersive experience. The game could loosely be described as historical fiction, and will be playable on the the HTC Vive and Oculus Rift Touch VR systems.

It promises to explore North Country environments, personalities, locations, and music, and it is in this final area that we especially would appreciate help from the local music community. While we are looking especially to include traditional music in the game, the story will jump across time periods, so more contemporary music is also needed.

The most notable added value offered by a Virtual Reality experience, going well beyond a traditional game experience, is presence, used to describe the uncanny feeling of actually being somewhere. And while we are taking great care to capture the Cranberry Lake region, including local objects and environments, we equally believe that involving local musicians in the game will help us to express to the player the feel of what it means to be, and to have been, in the North Country. And while not all music will make its way into the main story line, all music will have a place. We are specifically creating local taverns and inns, and in these establishments we will have both live music, as well as Jukeboxes, filled with songs of the North Country and Adirondacks. We are even experimenting with a Zen mode, where the player will be free to explore the environments, independent from the main story adventure, including especially the musical experience. Finally, we are looking to local storytellers to be included in the game as well, with their stories told through the game's NPCs (non player characters), who will inhabit our various buildings and locations. For example, you could interact with a friendly looking person at a bar, and be treated to a traditional Adirondack tale, told by local storytellers.

In a word, what we are hoping to capture is Adirondack "culture," and what could be a better cornerstone than a proud staging of local music. So stand up and be counted, and get in touch if you would like your music (or stories) to be included in our game, we really would love your help!

Songs of The Wood

Doug Irving - 2016 Adirondack Records

---KEITH GORGAS

Doug Irving is a songwriter whose career has spanned decades and resulted in the release of 16 albums. Nearly 40 of his songs have been covered by other artists, many of which were written during an extended stint as a Nashville songwriter. Irving is an accomplished musician on both guitar and piano, and his style defies pigeon-holing. Is it Folk, Rock, Country, or Swing? It's all of them, with a good bit of synthesis of genres. Currently living in Queensbury, NY, just outside the Adirondack Park, his most recent release, Songs Of The Wood focuses intensely on the history and natural beauty of the Adirondacks.

The opening track, Open Road, has an anthemic feel, not unlike the best of the California Country Rock era. It's easy to imagine it as part of Jackson Browne's catalog. Pat Severs provides a nice steel guitar line. Into The Wood made me think of Jethro Tull, if not quite so hard rocking. Must have been the flute part. Isaac Jaques is the tale of the Jesuit priest, the first European to see Lake George, which he named Lac de Saint Sacrament. The song relates how Jaques met his death on a return to the region at the hands of the Natives.

Camping is an ode to the joys of roughing it in the wilds of the Northeast. Fishing for Northern Pike, cooking over an open fire, and swimming all get their accolades and the song is graced with a tasty lead guitar line. Next up, Jonah, recounts the biblical story of a prophet gone astray. It closely follows the scriptural narrative in a slightly tongue in cheek delivery, recalling the style of Christian songwriter Don Francisco. Log Jam is a tasty instrumental featuring side man Pat Severs.

Just outside the village of Lake George is a highway up neighboring Prospect Mountain. There used to be a hotel at the top, served by a cog railroad, and their story is wistfully recounted in Prospect House (the train don't run here anymore). "From the front porch you could see, Clear from here to Albany.."

Black Flies bemoans the biting creatures of the North Woods, highlighted by a searing lead guitar. Glory Bound descriptively admires the old boats found on so many Adirondack lakes, with a pleasing swing feel. Mill Town, co-written with David Hughes, takes a long-ing look back at the rise and fall of the western Adirondack village of Newton Falls. The story has repeated itself all over the Northeastern US over the past 50 years. "When the train was running, they used to make paper, They used to make steel...in this mill town."

A trip to the Maine seacoast inspired the gentle Lighthouse. Damm Strait is a typical Country lament about a sure hit song whose rise to the top of the charts is stalled at number 2 by another hit from Country music legend George Strait. It's upbeat and danceable, and features Doug Moody's fiddle. As might be imagined, Name on the Wall salutes those who have stood in harm's way for their country. Like so many of these songs, the lyrical detail that Irving goes into is striking.

One of the prettiest songs on the CD is Changes, co-written with Wes Cunningham. Cunningham is a creative writer in his own right, and their combined talents result in finished product laden with "hit" potential. Irving pays tribute to the luthier who build his guitar in This Old Guitar. Again, his attention to specific details, like the types of wood for each part, is noteworthy.

A eulogy for Jackson, the beloved family dog, closes out the CD. 16 well-crafted songs; Doug Irving hands us a pleasant evening of rhymes, rhythms, and soothing notes. The afterglow hangs around like the smoke from an Adirondack camp fire.

THE SONGS:

- 1 Open Road 4:37
- 2 Into The Wood 4:08
- 3 Isaac Jogues 5:42
- 4 Camping 4:25
- 5 Jonah 3:43
- 6 Log Jam 3:11
- 7 Prospect Mountain(The train don't run here no more) 4:29

Beginning Anew

---Vic Clevenger

Well, here we are, a month into the new year, so, how you doin'? You know what I'm talking about. The goals, the resolutions and the dreams you've set out to accomplish in 2017. You've had a month to work on them, so I hope you're still going strong. However, if you're like me, you've found them easy to say and write down but a little more difficult to follow through. I knew I was in trouble with my New Year's resolutions when I decided to floss more. But on January 2nd I had to "rush" out the door, so something had to go and that something was flossing. Don't judge me, you don't floss either.

At least "no time" was the excuse I was telling myself as to why I couldn't follow through on my New Year dental hygiene ambitions. What I learned and really always knew, is excuses are just as easy to conceive as the goals we set and are much easier to accomplish. Perhaps you're having the same struggles I am in fulfilling your 2017 resolutions. But this is the point in which we tell ourselves, it doesn't have to be January 1st to begin a brand new you. So what if you're one month in and you've stopped exercising, today is a brand new day.

The cool thing about goals, dreams and resolutions is they are continually being adjusted to achieve success. For instance, another one of my goals for 2017 was to eat better beginning with grilled chicken. But I wasn't going to eat free range chicken any more. "Why is that," you may be asking yourself. The main reason is, I realized free range chickens are the Easy Riders of the poultry world. How would you like it if you were living a care-free life pecking for food wherever you wanted then all of a sudden you find yourself laying on a smoker in Florida all plucked and seasoned? So I made the adjustment to my resolutions to eat chickens that have been cooped up all their lives and have no dreams or ambitions. Besides that, they're just easier to catch.

OK, that may not be entirely true and most of you reading this know what it means to be a free range chicken but the point is still the same, excuses are everywhere you look. They seek to derail you from your dreams and goals leaving you with a "good" reason to fail. However, just because you've had a few stumbling blocks and discouraging moments already doesn't mean you can't still reach your goals. You just need to decide in your heart that you are going to pick yourself up and use those set-backs as learning opportunities to succeed. It's never too late to stand up to those road blocks, beginning brand new today.

So, if you'll excuse me, I have some goals to begin anew like flossing and chasing down a chicken for dinner. I believe you have some to begin again as well. Have fun beginning anew today.

FLASHBACK ANSWERS

1. Cilla Black, in 1964. She was discovered by the Beatles' manager Brian Epstein in 1963.
2. The Kinks, in 1968. The song looks at English country villages and hamlets, compared to modern cities.
3. Dewey Bunnell of America, in 1974. And yes, it references the Tin Man in the film "The Wizard of Oz." Bunnell claimed he never wanted the song recorded, but it went to No. 1.
4. From the Dos Passos 1925 novel by the same name.
5. "Tom Dooley," by the Kingston Trio, a No. 1 hit in 1958. Tom Dula was convicted of killing his pregnant girlfriend in 1866 in North Carolina and was sentenced to hang. Dula was pronounced "Dooley" at the time, and the song was passed down through generations.
